The Edinburgh Surgical Sciences Qualification

This three year part-time Masters programme in Surgical Sciences, taught entirely online, is offered by the Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh and the University of Edinburgh. The Edinburgh Surgical Sciences Qualification (ESSQ) supports trainees' acquisition of applied knowledge in the basic surgical sciences and equips them with the key academic tools that will support their learning throughout their training and surgical career.

This postgraduate degree clearly signals the trainee’s aspiration to train as a surgeon. The ESSQ also supports the trainee’s professional accreditation, in that the first two years of the programme follow the UK Intercollegiate Surgical Curriculum and are thereby excellent preparation for the Membership of the Royal College of Surgeons (MRCS) examination. ESSQ students’ performance in that examination is significantly better than that of other candidates.

The third and final year of the course entails the preparation of an approved research project that can be focused on the trainee’s own specialist surgical area of interest and leads to the degree of MSc in Surgical Sciences.

Applications are now open. For more information, to sample the learning environment and to apply for September 2011 visit: www.essq.rcsed.ac.uk